Special to the Gazette. HUNTSVILLE, TEX., July 25 .- About 10 o'clock this morning a man walked into Collector Adair's effice at the courthouse and stated that he had just killed a man and desired to give himself up. The collector at once took him in charge, the sheriff not being at hand, and earried him to the pen for safe keeping. From the prisoner's statement it was learned and a quarter from town, at Cline's wood yard, where the parties were engaged in cutting wood. The name of the party surrendering is L. J. McDonald, and the person killed is R. J. Williams, McDonald was visited shortly after his incarceration, and he made the following statement: He and Williams had been cutting wood all the morning, during which time Williams had been carsing very much and telling of the men he had killed or hurt, and declaring that he would cut or kill somebody or something before nean, terrorizing McDonald by his talk. They had stopped and taken a drink before at the spring, and were preparing to start to work again, when Villiams started towards McDonald in a og up an ax. The latter, think-

Wheat Opened Weak, Fluctuated Narrowly and Closed at a Decline-Coffee and Wool Markets Unchanged.

> Daily Revelw. OFFICE OF THE GAZETTE, FORT WORTH, TEX. 25, 1889.

There was another heavy kinfall parly this morning, and after the sun broke through the clouds the day was uncomfortably warm. Business, both wholesale and retail, in the different branches has been light and merchants have had plenty of spare time. Most of the wholesale business is from orders, and that the killing took place about a mile retail trade is mostly confined to city customers. Farmers are busy with their crops and have no time to come to town.

Wheat receipts except by rail have been very light. Prices remain steady at former quotations. Little or nothing is being done in wool, the receipts being in-Sugar, coffee and salt meats remain as-before quoted. At the close of the market to-day - the reling prices for all commodities were as given below.

MANUFACTURE OF COTTON GOODS. Cotton mills have been multiplying of latest the Sendir, and even at the West, so that the New England manufacturers find themselves pressed with competition from which they were formerly free. Assuming, as there is abundant reason to do, that factories will continue to increase in the Southern states, what are the Northern mills to do to hold their own? Two possibilities appear to open before them. One is the giving of more attention to the only moderate progress has been made in curing of foreign markets whether on the American continent or elsewhere. * *

Many American cotton factories are turning out coarse or mydium goods at as The English still have the lead in the production of the finer stuffs. But with the growth of the industry at the South, where nothing but the coarser grades has yet been attempted, continued success for the New England industry must apparently depend in great Billy further development in the direction of fine fabrics. This seems to be realized more generally than ever before by the East we manufacturers. Unusual demandi der tancy looms and for cotton of the longest possible staple has been observed of late, and in some of the New England factories goods fully equal to the best foreign productions are now turned out. Those capitalists who thus improve the present period of prosperity to prepare for more successful competition with the English mills when hard times come around again, will unquestiquably find that they have done wisely.
